ABSTRACT

A system, method and computer-readable medium for optimizing recovery logging is provided. A calling component stably logs a message from a called component only when sending a second message or sending a second message after a log force that writes the return message from the first message to the stable log. The called component stably logs its return message before the return message is sent.